THE view from the windows of Bon Echo dining-room is unsurpassed for scenic grandeur, and its tables, furnished from Bon Echo's own farm, insure fresh vegetables, pure milk, first-class eggs, and good butter. To see things grow, to know horses and cattle, is a rare treat for people who spend most of their time in smoky cities, and this feature will not be one of the least of Bon Echo's attractions.

COTTAGES

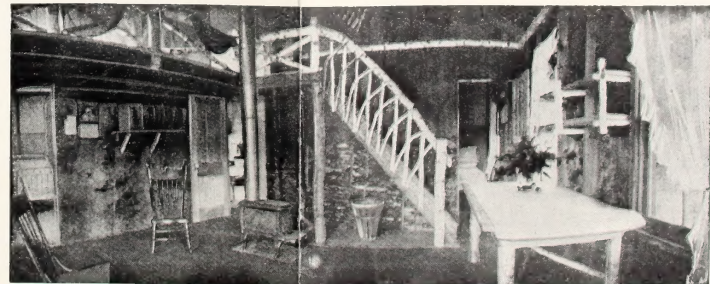

IN addition to the accommodation of the Inn proper, there are a number of cottages, tents and combination tents for those who prefer more of the camp features afforded by the tent, or the seclusion and privacy afforded by the cottages. Tents and cottages are not grouped, but are all within easy reach of the Inn and are given the same furnishing and care as the Inn. Cottages are especially suited to the needs of family parties. They are tastefully finished in wild barks, each having a distinct individuality.

THE BEAUTIES OF NATURE

TO the lover of Nature's beauties, Bon Echo offers a season of continuous delights. Climbing to the mountain top or the crest of some wooded knoll, one gets a view of miles of rock-bound lakes, or clambering to a higher pinnacle, one catches glimpses of mountain streams, with here and there sheets of water, hidden lakes of a mile or several miles in extent.

In opportunity for outdoor life and outdoor sport, with hotel accommodation unexcelled, and with select, congenial people, Bon Echo offers an ideal combination. Bon Echo Inn is new and modern in all its appointments, with an established reputation for first-class service and a cuisine to please the most exacting.

TENTS

THE trend of modern common sense calls for prevention rather than the cure of disease. With this in mind, Bon Echo Co. is anxious that its guest shall have in abundance all that goes to make people healthy. Fresh air both night and day is known to be a great restorer. In drawing attention to our tents, therefore, it is felt that some of the guests will prefer them to rooms in the Inn. They are 10x12 and 12x14 in size, are boarded up half way, and have good substantial floors. They are protected by wire screens, are covered with duck, and are furnished and cared for the same as rooms in the Inn. They will be found comfortable in every respect, and add a touch of outdoor life at once invigorating and fascinating, making a few weeks in the wilds of the Highlands a pleasant epoch of one's life.

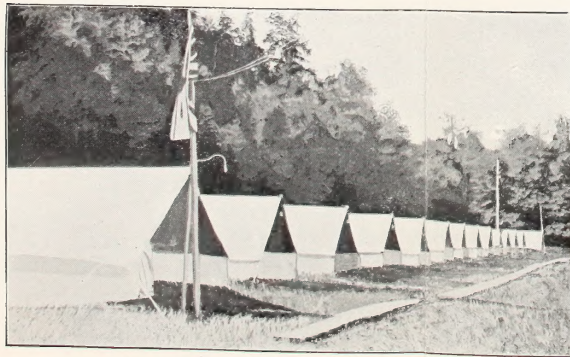

Watching the Afterglow.

The sunsets are very gorgeous, as seen from the porches of Bon Echo Inn, commanding as they do a view of the entire North Lake, eight miles to the north, and at the same time a full view of the great Gibraltar—Bon Echo.

Bon Echo Inn is beautifully located in the Massanoga Lake region, lying upon the very crest of the Ontario Highlands, about 2,000 feet above sea level. Massanoga is the natural centre of a chain of lakes and waterways, affording hundreds of miles of water accessible either to the sailing craft and launch, or to skiff and canoe.

Opened from June 15th to October 1st.

A Landing One Hundred Feet Above the Water.

Picture to yourself water deliciously cool, entirely free from even the suspicion of sediment, absolutely pure, gushing from the base of a rock 300 feet in height, and you have the water supplied by the management of Bon Echo Inn to its guests.

This water when analyzed at Case School of Applied Science gave the following remarkable results: "In 100,000 (one hundred thousand) parts only $3\frac{1}{2}$ parts of solids, nitrites none, nitrates none, Albumoids of Ammonia one-tenth of one part, Free Ammonia eight-hundredths of one part."

This is the purest of spring water, an ideal water for beverage purposes." Signed,

PROF. A. W. SMITH, Professor of Mineralogy.

In Nature's Heart

WHO does not long to get away from the rush of the city, and see Nature in her own magnificent garb? Such a place is right in our own Ontario. Away back where Nature got tired going up hill to form the source of the Little Mississippi and Moira Rivers, and sloped down towards the Georgian Bay, is a region that is unsurpassed for scenic grandeur. Two thousand feet up in the pure air of heaven a chain of lakes nestles; bounding the east side is a veritable "Gibraltar" formed of solid rock. Imagine a mountain of granite, miles in extent, being split in two and one-half sunk out of sight, leaving a precipice face clean-cut and majestic, two miles long and three to five hundred feet high.

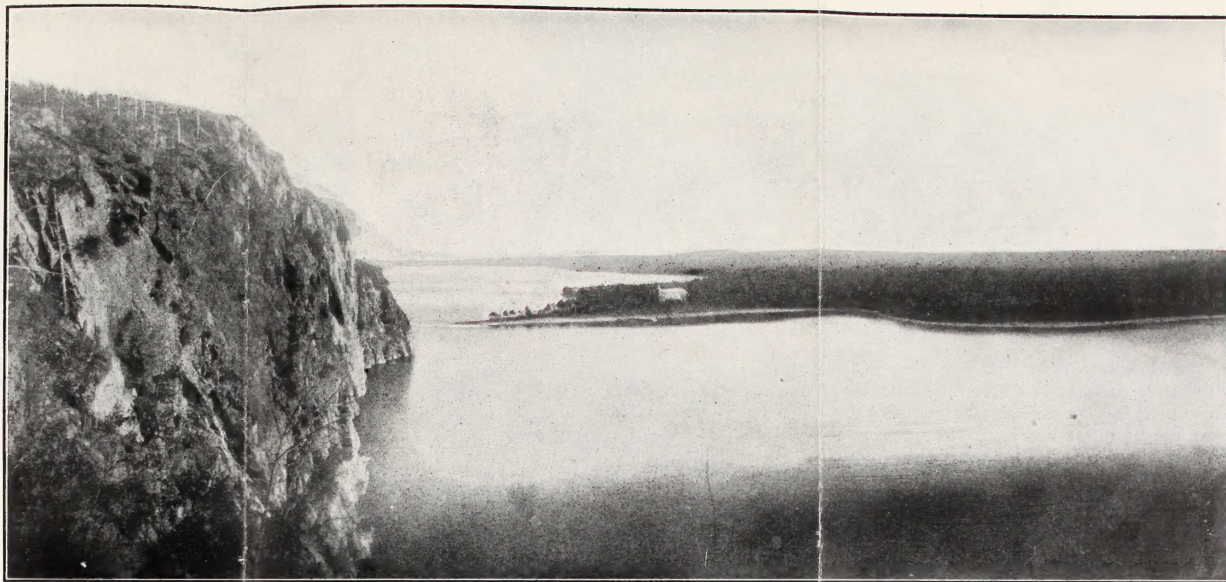

Part of this face is below water, and when paddling close to its awful wall, the depth of black water beneath and the mighty invincible rock above, it is certainly most awe-inspiring—and to add to its weirdness, strange Indian writings can be seen on the smooth rock near the water's edge, telling, they say, of battles fought between the warring tribes of Ojibways and Algonquins. In a split in the rock's face, one portion juts out past the main body, forming what at a distance would be an ideal toboggan slide, but when seen closely, is so steep and high that for many years to come the winds and the rains will be all that will venture down its slippery side. One friendly little spot is where a crack has widened out, and the ages have formed by bits of fallen stone and driftwood a small landing. Climbing up some fifty feet in this opening a spout of water comes from a small crevice in the rock. This water, in the hottest day in summer, is only two degrees above freezing, and is clear and sweet and sparkling. "The image of eternity, the throne of the invisible," is quite as applicable to this mighty rock as to the boundless "Ocean."

The Inn where we are stopping is on a narrow neck of land dividing the lake south of the old rock. Opposite this point a rustic bridge leads to a trail and stairway up the mountain's face, where vast quantities of huckleberries are dropping dead ripe from the bushes. In no place have I seen such a luxuriant growth of this fruit, clusters of the deep blue beauties resembling bunches of grapes. A few miles from here is a lake, the bottom of which is pure white marble, possibly too soft for monumental purposes, but which makes the finest grade of lime, and is a charming bit of Nature in a country where one seems surprised and pleased at every turn.—Toronto Saturday Night, Aug. 6th, 1904.

THE surrounding waters give opportunity for many interesting side trips from a half day in length to three or four days. Picnic parties find many pleasant places for a day's trip. The opportunities furnished for exploring trips by water in launch or canoe are most varied. Many overland walks are accessible for short rambles and the opportunities for exploring trips in wild country are unlimited.

What more delightful than a canoe trip with picnic supplies and good fishing tackle! This splendid string of fish was caught in three hours in White Fish Rapids, reached after an enjoyable paddle down Marble River and Marble Lake. Massanoga Lake was been stocked by the Government with parent bass and fry, and these gamey fish give joy to the sportsmanlike angler. The deep water trolling for salmon trout is the finest of sports, and many other varieties of fish are found in Massanoga and nearby lakes. Popular, indeed, are canoe trips extending over several days or a week, when tents and food supplies are furnished to guests, together with competent guides, when they can explore Nature in her wildnesses to their heart's content. The tracks of deer and bear, or the sight of these habitants of the backwoods, give a romantic, adventurous zest to an outing in these Highlands.

Bon Echo Inn will keep open through September.

Beautiful as is Bon Echo all the long summer days, it is possibly eclipsed by the early fall and hazy Indian Summer. Then the forest's cool green turns to vivid crimsons, brilliant yellows and deep russet browns, in all their varied shadings, making September a delightful month to spend in the woods.
